

Behavioral Science

In today's complex technological society, there is an ever-increasing need for a theoretical and scientific understanding of human behavior. The Bachelor of Arts degree in Behavioral Sciences draws from theories, principles, and scientific research in psychology and human behavior to present a broad view of human thought, emotion, and action. The degree provides students with a solid background in the discipline so they can operate more effectively as a person and pursue advanced studies in the field.

Career Opportunities for Behavioral Science Majors

- Academia/Education
- Community Service
- Health
- Human Resources
- Local, state, and federal government
- Military
- Philanthropic work

Employers of Behavioral Science Majors

- Business and Industry
- Community Service Agencies
- Educational Institutions
- Health Agencies/Hospitals
- Local, State and Federal Government
- Non-Profit Agencies

Professional Associations and Affiliations

American Counseling Association www.counseling.org

American Management Association www.amanet.org /

American Psychology Association www.apa.org

Behavior Online
www.behavior.net

EDJOIN: California Public Education Jobs
www.edjoin.org

Human Resources Jobs Page www.nationjob.com/hr

Internet Nonprofit Center
www.nonprofits.org

Jobs 4 HR
www.jobs4hr.com

Jobs in Higher Education
www.higheredjobs.com

Nonprofit Career Network
www.nonprofitcareer.com

Society for Human Resource Management www.shrm.org

State of California Jobs www.spb.ca.gov/employment/